If you own copyrights in musical compositions that Spotify made available for interactive streaming and/or limited downloading, you could get benefits from a class action settlement.

You received this postcard because you have been identified as a potential owner of a registered copyright in one or more musical compositions. The plaintiffs in the class action lawsuit allege that Spotify made certain musical compositions with registered copyrights (or applications for registration) available for interactive streaming and/or limited downloading without a license. They allege that this conduct violated federal copyright law. Spotify denies any wrongdoing or liability and denies the allegations. A settlement of the class action has been reached. Under the proposed settlement, you may be entitled to a payment and other benefits.

To read a more detailed description of the terms of the proposed settlement, please visit www.SpotifyPublishingSettlement.com or call toll free 1-855-474-3853.

If you wish to receive benefits under the settlement, you must submit a claim form no later than 210 days after the Settlement Claims Start Date. The claim form will be available online at www.SpotifyPublishingSettlement.com or by calling 1-855-474-3853. If the settlement is approved, class members who timely submit valid claim forms will be entitled to receive payments and other benefits under the settlement, including future royalty payments. If you are a class member, whether you file a claim form or not, any legal claims that you may have or could have in the future regarding the musical compositions at issue will be released. If you do not wish to be bound by the terms of the settlement, you must exclude yourself from the settlement by September 12, 2017. You also may instead formally object to the settlement. Visit www.SpotifyPublishingSettlement.com for information on how to do so.
